Helping others

Have you ever seen somebody in need? Like an old woman trying to carry her heavy shopping bags or a little child which fell down?

How do you feel when you think about helping others? Others could be your mother or your siblings, your neighbour or a complete stranger.

Scientists frequently research our behaviour when it comes to helping others on the street. And they found out that we are not the best when it comes to helping. Most of us turn away, walk away or try to ignore the person in need.

Only some are willing to help. Some call these helpers 'street heros' because they make our world a better place to live.

Could you be a street hero? Have you helped somebody before? Or did somebody help you?

Act it out!

① Read the text. Find three friends and act out the dialogues.

Lisa: Hey, you all! Have you ever helped somebody?
Anna: Yes, I did! And I felt very good!
Henry : I have not helped somebody before. I do not like to help.
Miles: What? Never?? I mean, not even your mother?
Lisa: But I meant have you ever helped somebody that you do not know.
Anna: Okay, well. No. I have not helped a stranger before.
Miles: I did. There was this homeless person walking past the restaurant we were sitting. And he was asking the cook for food. I gave him my leftover pizza.
Henry : Wow. How was that?
Lisa: Yes, how did you feel?
Anna: Sounds like a really good thing.
Miles: I felt great. And it was so simple.
Lisa: I want to be more active in helping others.
Anna: What could we do?
Henry : Maybe we do not have to do a lot. Just be open to help others.
Miles: Yes. That is the way. We have to take care of each other.
Lisa: Let's try to do that!
Anna: I will! Cool!
Henry : I am in!
