Seadragons

Seadragons are some of the strangest fish in the sea.

The weedy seadragon in particular looks more like seaweed than a fish.

It has flaps of skin that make wavy branches, which help to disguise it.

The seadragon also drifts along like seaweed. So a predator might swim straight by without recognizing it.

For a mouth, seadragons have a tube that is perfect for sucking up shrimp and tiny plankton.

Seadragons are cousins of seahorses. Like seahorses, it's the fathers who are in charge of the eggs.

The male weedy seadragon's tail turns yellow when he is ready to carry eggs.

Each dragon dad carries around two hundred eggs, which the female seadragon gave him.

The eggs stick safely under his leafy tail until they are ready to hatch.

Nature is speaking

Nature Is Speaking -
Harrison Ford is
'The Ocean'

Listen to Harrison Ford as 'The ocean'.

Answer the following questions.

Use the simple past!

① What was the video about?

② What did the ocean say about humans?

③ What did the message at the very end say?

I am the ocean

I am the ocean.
I'm water.
I'm most of this planet.
I shaped it.
Every stream, every cloud and every rain drop - it all comes back to me.
One way or another, every living thing here needs me.
I am the source.
I'm what they crawled out of.
Humans?
They're no different.
I don't owe them a thing.
I give.
They take.
But I can always take back.
That's just the way it has always been.
It's not their planet anyway.
Never was.
Never will be.
But humans, they take more than their share.

They poison me, then they expect me to feed them.
Well, it doesn't work that way.
If humans want to exist in nature with me
and off of me,
I suggest they listen close.
I am only going to say this once:
If nature isn't kept healthy, humans won't survive.

Me, I could give a damn, with or without humans.
I'm the ocean.
I covered this entire planet once.
And I can always cover it again.

That's all I have to say.
